

IN RECOGNITION OF THE NATIONAL DAY OF TRUTH AND RECONCILIATION,
THE INDIGENOUS COMMUNITY COLLECTIVE PRESENTS

TRUTH. RESILIENCY. HOPE.

Shkagamik-Kwe Health Centre, Indigenous community partners and citizens would like to invite students, Grades 5 and up, to a day of education and honouring of the National Day of Truth and Reconciliation.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 2022 AT 10 A.M.
GRACE HARTMAN AMPHITHEATRE
BELL PARK, SUDBURY

This education will include a relaxed performance of the show titled Debwewin (Truth), followed by a short film created by local Indigenous artists.

To ensure the emotional, mental, physical and spiritual wellbeing of the students who attend, the theatre troupe will present a relaxed performance of the show, which will include a reduction of sound and lighting to avoid the risk of overwhelming and overstimulating. The troupe will invite students to engage in activities that will help them feel involved, engaged and able to absorb the truths that are shared with them in a good way.

There will also be healing jingle dress dancers, sacred medicines, Elders, EMS and other health supports on hand for the duration of the day.

We know that many educators are looking for ways to honour the young ones who were harmed by the residential school system, while honouring their own students with the truth.

We are proud to be a part of that education with this day of Truth, Resiliency and Hope on National Day of Truth and Reconciliation 2022.

As education around truth is integral on our path towards reconciliation, Indigenous organizations are coming together to create a space of education for the students of Sudbury from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on September 30th.

Bus drop-off for students will be at the old Sudbury general parking lot and students can follow the path to the Grace Hartman Amphitheatre.

Limited capacity. First come, first served.
